TWO BODIES RECOVERED

Victims of Double Drowning Tragedy at Lyndonville. One Was an Only Child.

Two sets of boys' wearing apparel found on the bank of the river Monday evening strengthened the fears that had come with the failure of two boys to return home. A few hours later the fears were confirmed when two little bodies were removed from the river, and two homes were darkened by the hand of death. The victims of the double drowning were Leo, aged eight, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Beauregard; and William, aged seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jock. The details of the drowning were not known, and probably never will be known; but the boys went out to the river back of the school-house Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. When Mr. Beauregard got home from his work and found his son still missing, he started in search; and it was soon found that the Jack boy was also missing. The search led to the river and there on the bank they found several articles of clothing. The river was then searched, resulting in the recovery of the bodies at about 8:30 o'clock.

Ex-Mayor W. J. Foley of East Palestine, Ohio, who has been staying at Hotel Barton for a few weeks, was brought up by Patrick Rowen, father of J. V. Rowen, proprietor of the hotel. Mr. Foley is a prominent man in Ohio as will be seen from the following, clipped from an Ohio paper, and speaks words for the sturdy Vermont raising. "Ex-Mayor William J. Foley of East Palestine, once the democratic candidate for congress in this Eighteenth district, came to the city this morning to take the Erie for the east, it being his pleasure to have a fortnight's vacation which he will spend back in old Vermont in the town of Barton, where he was born. It has been 35 years since William left the hills and the rocky fields of the Green Mountain state, and this is his first visit back to the old town, where he goes to be present at the settling up and dividing of the old estate. As a sort of old home coming he enjoyed a celebration here in this city preparatory to starting on his journey that will keep him on the go till about sunrise o'er the hills o' Vermont on Wednesday morning, in time to wake the folks back at home."

HARDWICK ITALIAN SHOT.

Two Hardwick Foreigners Have Row Sunday and One Shoots Other from Ambush Later.

Angelo Lenzini, an Italian, was shot in the back at Hardwick Sunday afternoon probably by a Spaniard named Pedro Ruin, who is at large. The affair is alleged to have grown out of a party held on Saturday afternoon which was attended by both men and at which liquor is said to have flown rather freely. The two men became engaged in a debate. Lenzini is said to have used a pitcher to punctuate his argument. Ruin's forehead was laid open and it required some five stitches to close the wound. Ruin wanted vengeance and it is said laid in wait for Lenzini on the railroad a short distance from the town. A party of men, among whom was Lenzini, came along the track and were startled by a revolver shot from some bushes behind them. Lenzini reeled and fell to the ground. The other men turned their attention to him and the man who fired the shot and who is alleged to have been Ruin, escaped. Lenzini was rushed to the local hospital and the physicians made an attempt to locate the bullet with probes. It was found and proved to be a 32-calibre missile. State's Attorney Guy Hill of St. Johnsbury came and took charge of the case, and Sheriff Winch is trying to locate Ruin as the man who fired the shot. Ruin is a Spaniard of dark complexion, about 27 years of age and weighs about 180 pounds. The bullet took effect in one lung, ranging upward from the back.
